

Helping companies navigate the requirements of public company practice

Exchange rules and regulations are an important part of building and maintaining the integrity and credibility of NASDAQ OMX Nordic and its listed companies. NASDAQ OMX continuously works to promote confidence in our markets that support the valuation of our listed companies.

Seminars on exchange rules and regulations

There are many requirements that need to be fulfilled as a listed company, both in the application process and as a listed company. Disclosure rules, for example, regulate the procedures of when and how listed companies disclose information to the market. Any information that is likely to materially influence the valuation of a listed company must be distributed broadly enough to be available to all market participants simultaneously.

NASDAQ OMXSM offers seminars for directors, senior management and auditors of companies already listed and those considering a listing, as well as advisers and other market professionals. These seminars cover listing requirements, disclosure rules, insider legislation and other important regulations for listed companies.

Seminars can be conducted in person or via video conference for individual companies.
