REGULATORY NOTICE

Notification of technical changes to the Rules of the Exchange entering into force October 6, 2014

The standard settlement cycle of trades will be shortened starting on October 6, 2014. The T+2 standard settlement will be introduced in the Nordic exchanges of the Nasdaq as a part of the implementation of the Central Securities Depository Regulation. The trades will be settled on the second business day after the trade takes place.

The Rules of the Exchange have been amended according to the T+2 settlement cycle. There will be changes in the trading periods of certain listed securities, however, the changes do not require any particular measures by the listed companies, if not otherwise indicated here below.

The trading days of the following securities in the trading system have been determined by using T+3 settlement cycle:

- convertible notes
- option loans (bond with warrants)
- option rights
- bonds.

The trading days of those instruments can be changed according to the new T+2 settlement cycle, but this will not be made automatically. In order to change the trading day information in the trading system (adding one day), please contact the Market Surveillance.

The changes to the Rules of the Exchange are (rule number, change in bold):

Rule changes relating to the listed companies

2.2.13.2 Trading in subscription rights entitling to a share commences on the first day of their subscription period and ends so that the subscription rights will be last tradable on the fourth trading day immediately preceding the close of the subscription period.

3.2.7.1 Trading in an option right and a combination of a bond with warrants and an option right will commence on a trading day decided by the Exchange. The trading of an option right on the Official List will end so that the option right will be last tradable on the fourth trading day immediately preceding the last subscription day of the share that is the subject of the option right. If a bond with warrants is traded together with an option right, the bond is listed without the option right beginning from the third trading day preceding the last subscription date of the share until maturity, or until the bond otherwise becomes due and payable in full.
3.2.7.2 Trading in a convertible note commences on a day decided by the Exchange. Trading in a convertible note ends so that the convertible note will be last tradable on the fourth trading day immediately preceding the close of the conversion period. Thereafter, trading will continue as a debt instrument until maturity, or until the bond otherwise becomes due and payable in full.

The rule change relating to the real estate investment funds

4.2.12.2 Trading in subscription rights entitling to a share commences on the first day of their subscription period and ends so that the subscription rights will be last tradable on the fourth trading day immediately preceding the close of the subscription period.

The rule change relating to the funds listed on the Exchange

7.2.7.3 A yield from a mutual fund or other right related to a book-entry security are last traded on the Exchange together with the book-entry security on the second trading day preceding the applicable record date.
